

Who is Suni Paz?

Suni Paz has recorded and has been published extensively. Singing in English and Spanish, she has performed her music, thrilling audiences of all ages on stage, radio, and television all over the world. Her latest appearances have included the PBS television special "A Place of Our Own/ Los Niños en su Casa" and two features on Telemundo.

Among the myriad of concert halls she has graced are the famed Bottom Line in New York (sharing the stage with performers such as Bob Dylan, Pete Seeger, Don Maclean, Richie Havens, and the late folk icon Phil Ochs) and Madison Square Garden. She has been part of some of the most important folk music festivals of our time like the Clearwater Revival.

Her unique songs inspire positive ideas, the strength of the human spirit, and a caring world view.

Suni Paz is an upbeat, energetic performer- full of love and life. Her songs have something to say to anyone looking for content, culture, or just pure joy. She uses folk music, children's music and popular rhythms from all of Latin America, as well as other parts of the globe, bringing a natural earth-bound warmth to any event.

She is involved in an ongoing collaboration with award-winning writers and poets Alma Flor Ada and F. Isabel Campoy, setting their lyrics to music and recording them. Her expertise also encompasses voice-overs for radio and television, transcription of songs from English and French into Spanish, and advertising.

Now, Suni Paz, poet and writer, introduces herself to the public, completing "another turn of the merry-go-round that is my life" as she describes this moment.

Extended Bio

Born into a talented Argentine Italian-Catalonian family of writers, musicians, linguists and poets, Suni Paz started playing the guitar, writing songs, singing in choirs, and at family parties at age 12. From 1960 to 1963 she lived in Chile. From 1963 to 1965, she raised her two children, making a living by writing and singing advertising jingles for various companies and becoming a copywriter trainee for McCann Erickson-Chile.

In 1967, she moved to California with her two children. There, she designed curriculum for elementary schools presenting Latin American culture through songs, stories and dances. She studied voice and music, began her studies towards a BA in Sociology and Literature, re-married, got a School District permit to perform in the schools in Los Angeles and Oakland and thus began her teaching and singing career in the United States, which has flourished.

Ten years later, Suni completed an MA from Rutgers University and teaching credentials from New York City.

She chose her name, Suni which means "ever-lasting," from the Quechua language, so as to be able to disseminate the rich indigenous cultures of the Americas in lyrics, rhythms, and instruments such as the charango, caja, and bombo. Paz is a last name that is found in every Latin American country. Its meaning is peace. To find inner peace and share it with others is Suni's quest in life. To sing and play rhythms, creating a bridge between cultures, has been her trademark.

Out of need to have some themes addressed, Suni began writing her own lyrics and setting to music some of her concerns in order to give a voice to the silent and forgotten ones. She has sung in communities, schools, at rallies and marches, and later at colleges, universities, and festivals in the United States, Latin America and Europe.

In the sixties, having settled in New York, Suni recorded her first record: Breaking Out of the Silence/Brotando del Silencio on Barbara Dane's label. In the seventies, Moe Asch from Folkways Records requested three children's albums: Alerta, Children Songs for the Playground and From the Sky of my Childhood, which Suni recorded accompanied by noted cellist Martha Siegel. The three albums solidified Suni's voice as a singer-songwriter of children's songs. The albums became pivotal in Suni's career as an educator and musician, using songs to teach about all subjects and about life.

In 1984, Suni met Dr. Alma Flor Ada, a renowned writer and poet of children's stories, living and working in San Francisco. Dr. Ada was interested in having her lyrics set to music and recorded by Suni.

Together with Vivi Escrivá, a magnificent illustrator living in Spain, Alma Flor Ada's lyrics and Suni's music, a trio of creativity across two continents became established. In 1997, Suni met poet and writer Francisca Isabel Campoy who writes children's books about Latin America and Spain with Dr.

Alma Flor Ada. The trio became a quartet. Suni then began writing music, recording and performing Ada's and Campoy's lyrics and stories which they now present together in conferences on education in USA and Latin America. Thus, Suni Paz continues today with her career as an author, lyricist, singer, songwriter, recording artist, and performer of children's songs. She has just published her own collection of short stories and anecdotes about growing up in Argentina and has an upcoming release about her life in Chile, New York and Spain.

Suni writes her own songs whenever she needs to reinforce some idea, cultural or spiritual value. Currently, she is promoting her new Smithsonian Folkways CD "Bandera Mía" with a concert tour, combining stirring folk songs from Argentina and her inspiring biographical stories.

She enjoys involving her sons in her recordings. Her eldest, Juan, plays keyboard on several of her albums. Her youngest, Ramiro Fauve, a singer-songwriter and outstanding artist continues to create music with her.

Look for one of her stories in the upcoming collection "The Spirit of a Woman" by Terry Gopadze. Suni's poems were published in the book "La Inefable Locura de ser Poeta" with 20 poets from Los Angeles. She is presently recording a CD with Argentine poet and painter Rodolfo Spadano and Hugo Wainzinger.
